Billups new head of Merchants Bank

$ million passed in Bay building

Guy C. Billups, Jr., of Hammond, La., has been elected chairman of the board of Merchants Bank and Trust Co. and Dee Hamilton of Gulfport has been named president and chief executive officer.

The two new officers were chosen by the board of directors at a special meeting last Friday upon culmination of the sale of an additional $70,000 worth of capital stock in the bank, authorized earlier this month by the State Board of Banking.

Doubling of the bank's capital structure up to $140,000 will enable it to increase its scope of services to keep pace with the growth of the Bay St. Louis and Gulf Coast areas, bank officials said.

The new chairman of the board is married to the former Guyard of Bay St. Louis, a granddaughter of one of Merchants Bank's founders, the late Walter J. Cox. Both her late father, Walter Cox, Jr., and maternal grandfather, Dr. H.E. Eldridge, served on the board for many years.

Billups has wide business interests. He has served as chairman of the Louisiana Board of Commerce and Industry, formerly was vice president of Billups Petroleum Co., and is now associated with several automobile agencies and (Cont. on Page 5-A.)

Berm to start at Bay and work west

The $1,031,608.50 contract for the sand berm to be started July 1, it was learned Wednesday from the Mobile District of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The Corps is handling the Hurricane Betsy repair work for the Office of Emergency Planning.

Ferrall Construction Co. of Memphis, Tenn., low bidder on the seawall protection project, has been assembling the necessary data and supplies for the project since bids were opened June 22. Notice to proceed with the work is expected some time next week.

Tentative plans call for the seawall repairs to start at the Bay St. Louis end of the seawall since larger structures to be erected are located there. The berm will be dredged in from the vicinity of Ballantine Street to Clermont Harbor.

The plan under consideration is to bring in the sand in two lifts—allowing the first to consolidate before it is raised again. The berm will extend out level for 50 feet from the edge of the seawall and then slope out another 150 feet into the water.

Where structures are to be placed, dredging will leave a swale so drainage can be maintained along the beach. This is because numerous outlets carry sanitary waste and there are direct overflow lines from septic tanks in the low, soggy areas.

Ferrall has indicated it will sub-contract the dredging phase of the work and probably only one dredge will be used. The job is to be completed by the end of this year. To get an early start the contractor has already begun survey and engineering work to get clearances for pile bents as they can be purchased and contract plans and beach marks are being located.

A site near Gulfport Mobile odist Assembly is being investigated for a storage yard for the contractor. A 3-month rental of a beachfront house as a temporary office is also under study.

Casotte visited by harbor men

A possible sight line change to come in Hancock County was the record of 22 local men who toured part and harbor facilities in Jackson County Tuesday.

The trip was sponsored by Hancock County Port and Harbor Commission and Michael Baker, Jr., Inc., engineers for both the local commission and for Jackson County Port Authority.

In 1954 the Pascagoula port handled 285,147 tons of tonnage commerce. Now it handles about one million tons a month. In between came the dredging of the channel, creation of the Bayou Cocan Industrial Port, a 25,000,000 sq ft per day fresh water supply. (Cont. on Page 5-A.)

THREE THIRTY FIVE TONS --- Paul McQuerry, inspector, Hazlett and Erdal Construction Co., Louisville, Ky., left, stands by the readings after test runs placed last week on top of bridge piling's 350-ton test load. Engineers later added on further weight to bring total weight to 400-ton test load level. Piling is one of several items being tested by Brown and Root, general contractor for $4.9 million Louisville and Nashville Railroad bridge over Bay of St. Louis.

Hancock case 1st on redistrict list

Hancock County's redistricting case is set for trial in federal court in Jackson at 9 a.m. Tuesday, July 14.

The suit to secure more equitable representation for the Bay St. Louis-Waveland area is filed with the U.S. District Court in Jackson.

The case is the first of several being redistricted in the federal court in Jackson.

The lawsuit was filed in U.S. District Court at Biloxi on June 19. To date no known affirmative action has been taken by the local board of supervisors to remedy this discrimination against Beat 5.

Subsequently, citizens in Harrison, Pearl River and Stone Counties filed similar suits, as well as in Pike County.

Hearing the Hancock case will be Judge James P. Coleman of the 5th District Court of Appeals, and District Judges Harold Cox and Claude Clayton.

The 1960 federal census which places Hancock County's population at 14,000, showed Beat 5 contained 63 per cent of the population—or 8,853 individuals. Beat 1 with 1,333 persons contained 9.4 per cent; Beat 2 with 859 persons was 6.1 per cent; Beat 3 with 1,147 persons had 8.1 per cent while Beat 4 comprised 13 per cent—1,839 residents.

The most recent breakdown of qualified voters in the county shows that more than 60 per cent of the total of 8,400 lives in the Bay St. Louis-Waveland-Clermont Harbor-Lakeshore area which is represented by the Beat 5 supervisor.

In contrast the 631 voters in Beat 1, basically Pearl River comprising 7 per cent of the total, have one vote. Beat 2—which has been reduced to four and one-half sections of inhospitable land since NASA's Mississippi Test Facility took over—represented 5.6 per cent with its 478 qualified electors.

Beat 3 covers the north-eastern section of the county along the Harrison line. It has 763 qualified voters and its supervisor represents 8.1 per cent of the people.

Stretching from Lestova (Casper precinct) in the northwest corner to Kiln and Fenton in the southeast, Beat 4 accounts for 17 per cent of the electorate. The lead count there is 1,423.

Application of the one-man-one-vote theory to the 8,400 qualified voters would indicate a perfect division for the five (Cont. on Page 5-A.)

Bells to toll on July 4

When bells throughout Bay-Waveland area ring out at noon Monday, July 4, they will mark the 142nd anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Clement R. Bontemps Post 139 of the American Legion is sponsoring the local participation in coordination with some 2,000 communities across the country. Practiced on a country-wide basis the past two years, it revives a custom in general use until less than a hundred years ago. In some cities the practice never ceased. Marblehead, Mass., reportedly has rung the town bells on the Fourth of July each year since 1776.

Clyde Craig, chairman of the legion's Fourth of July Committee, and Fred Foyard, chairman of the Americanism Committee, head the local post's drive for observance.

SPECIAL GIFTS -

Directors of Hancock County United Fund have named William Richards as special gift chairman for 1956 drive. Assistant cashier at Hancock Bank, Richards is vice chairman of official board of Main Street Methodist Church, president of Bay St. Louis Jaycees, 1956-57, is married to the former Edna M. Stanley of Starkville and resides with his wife and three children at 128 Mahady Lane.

Kirkland to head Pearlington School

For the second time since naming their new, and as yet only partially built, plant at Pearlington the Charles B. Murphy Elementary School, county school trustees have named a principal to the unit.

W.A. Kirkland of Carrier was nominated to the post Monday to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of principal-elect E.E. Breland earlier this month.

Two other appointments helped lessen a faculty dearth at the school since a wave of resignations effective at the end of last school year had virtually eliminated the teacher force.

Mrs. Janice N. Hawkins of Bay St. Louis, with an A certificate was hired as a $4,800 per annum and Mrs. Rufus Tate, holder of a B certificate and former Logansport teacher, at $3,500. Mrs. Tate's appointment is contingent on her acceptance of contract.

Other teacher appointments were to Hancock North Central, Mrs. Yvonne Lee Thrush, Pearl River, La., B certificate, to first grade at $3,500 and Mrs. Linda R. Bourgeois, Waveland, A certificate, High School English at $4,600.

Kirkland, a graduate of Clark Memorial College, Pearl River Junior College and University of Southern Mississippi, has had six years experience as principal in Loys, Thomas and Union Elementary Schools.

A social studies teacher at Pearl River High School from 1959-65 he is presently at Pearl River Junior High School.

Recommended by Robert F. Leiner, county superintendent, to a one year contract at $5,700, to become effective July 1, he will continue to his home in Carrier and receive an additional $100 per month to cover traveling expenses. The latter payment is to compensate for their being no residence available.

Responding to questions posed by trustees regarding his other activities and thoughts on integration Kirkland said, "I have no other interests outside of the school and will devote 100 per cent of my time to it."

"There is nothing we can do about integration except recognize the fact that if we educate Negroes we will make better citizens out of them."

In the same vein, trustees asked Leiner if any positive reply had been received from Washington regarding an on the (Cont. on Page 5-A.)

Patron of legal liquor views law on July 1 eve

Even though he feels the Meese case set up for the new state liquor law may be too high, the father of the measure firmly believes the package dealer and beer operator will make a handy profit under the plan.

State Rep. Walter J. Phillips of Bay St. Louis, who sponsored House Bill 112 to his successful passage as chairman of the House Temperance Committee, discussed the finer points of the legislation this week.

"There is no reason anyone in business today and making a profit should not be able to operate successfully under H.B. 112," Phillips asserted. With respect to its special features for the recent Gulf Coast, he characterized it as an "open defense" law.

The new law which goes into effect tomorrow, July 1, does not prohibit liquor, only white-liquor purchased from the state can be sold by licensed package stores or retail on-premises licensees. But, he noted,

Laws revise school set-up for Hancock

Two changes in the operation of the Hancock County school district, enacted at the recent session of the state legislature, have been placed into law by Gov. Paul Johnson.

State Rep. Walter J. Phillips, reporting on the session's action of local interest, said the measure carried which calls for appointment of county superintendent of education beginning in 1972. This means that the superintendent will be elected for the last County School Board term (Cont. on Page 5-A.)

the law does not prohibit possession of liquor acquired by an individual from Schwegmann's or any other place. The individual simply can't sell it.

No does local H.B. 112 (the licensing bill) is a little step for the state. At one stage his colleagues wanted $1,200 and $200 for every little barroom and in the Delta most municipalities charge $100 a month tax as well.

However, whiskey can be bought cheaper by a licensee under the new law. Generally the wholesale price to the state will be cheaper, the Louisiana expert change is eliminated along with the Mississippi whiskey (black market) change and the other possible state income sources.

Old co-operators will now pay a $1/2 per cent black market sales tax per drink which was paid by the wholesaler (Cont. on Page 5-A.)

Letters to the Editor

Editor, Sea Coast Echo

Last year I asked you to put an article about our meeting place in Waveland and they were kind enough to put it out on the beach. I am asking again for some steps. The children get all their legs scraped up getting out of the water and the parents can't even go in as they can't get out.

I know they have been working hard to get our streets fixed up and they have done a wonderful job. I can't say that for Bay St. Louis as you can break an axle if you try and get anywhere in Bay St. Louis.

The town of Waveland has done a very good job of our little town, or shall I say big town, by really giving all the time.

Thanking you

Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON—The President of the United States may be a doting Daddy as far as his two daughters are concerned, but officially he's against any permanent recognition of Father's Day. Mothers may be all right but fathers, no. They are on their own.

Word of this came to light when Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., and Rep. Joe Ricketts, D-N.Y., introduced resolutions putting the United States government on record in favor of fathers.

Sen. Randolph is a director of Big Brothers of the national capital area and wanted not only to honor fathers, but highlight the problem of caring for fatherless boys. This is the goal of Big Brothers, namely, to find one man who has idea of a big brother as a companion for a fatherless boy.

Rep. Ricketts was also interested in emphasizing this. However, all acts of Congress, ranging from resolutions to major appropriations bills, must go to the Budget Bureau for approval. Reason: To keep congressional spending down and make sure an act of Congress conforms to the president's policies and budget. So when the Father's Day resolutions reached the Budget Bureau, its serious-minded officials took out their pencils and tried to figure how much Father's Day would cost the nation.

They figured hard. But for the life of them they couldn't figure how Father's Day would cost President Johnson, or the taxpayers, anything. There was no provision in the resolutions for spending anything, not even to have the band play or come speeches made. The resolutions merely proposed that the nation pay tribute on a family-to-family basis to the male head of the family and consider the importance of befriending children who weren't fortunate enough to have fathers.

Even so, the Budget Bureau was suspicious. Maybe there was a hidden dollar come place behind the resolutions which they didn't see.

Finally, it decided to OK the Father's Day resolutions for one year only. This would give them time to see whether the expenditure of hidden dough was involved.

One senator against fathers

When the resolutions reached the full Senate, they had the sympathetic support of Sen. Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., the Democratic leader, father of a comely Irish colleen who occasionally, not often, listens to the advice of the senator. But the resolutions aroused the opposition of Mansfield's assistant Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, who claimed that Father's Day was for the benefit of merchants.

"Why is it necessary to have a national Father's Day?" Sen. Long asked.

"The distinguished senator from Louisiana," remonstrated Sen. Randolph, "would not, I am sure, want to have invalidated the legislation which created Mother's Day. Would he want that act rescinded now by the Congress?"

"I am not a mother," replied Sen. Long, "and I do not feel particularly qualified to speak on the subject."

Sen. Randolph rallied to the defense of both fathers and mothers, and after further discussion Sen. Long, with a weather eye on the Dodd hearings and charges of conflicts of interest, concluded: "Inasmuch as I am a father and have something of an interest in this matter, I should like to act to be excused from voting on it."

Other members of the Senate, 95 per cent of them fathers, chose to ignore their conflict of interest and voted themselves and the rest of the fathers of the nation a resolution of tribute on Father's Day.

However, as far as the Johnson administration is concerned, it is on record in favor of fathers for 1966 only, not 1967. Because of the Budget Bureau, this weighty problem will have to be tackled again next year.

Haircuts and restrooms

While the Budget Bureau cast a jaundiced eye at Father's Day, the House of Representatives cast a jaundiced eye at free haircuts, free bottled water for senators, and other picaresque problems. Members of the House do not get free haircuts or bottled water.

"Is there any money in this bill for free haircuts for members of the House, or for spring water?" inquired Rep. H.R. Gross, R-Iowa, during debate on the $172 million housekeeping bill for Congress.

"So far as I know," replied Rep. George Andrews, D-Ala., "there never has been any money appropriated for free haircuts on this side and neither have we made any money available for mountain water for the members."

Gross, "Now, is there any money in this bill for the manning of the automatic elevators in the Rayburn Building?"

Andrews: "There is a small amount in the bill, but it is not being used."

Gross: "These elevators operate as well, if not better, without being manned. It would be my hope that no one gets the idea that simply because there is money available they should go out and hire operators."

Gross also raised a fuss about the lack of an adequate restroom on the House side for women visitors to the Capitol. "If we can have a car wash on the main floor of the garage in the Rayburn Building, I certainly think a women's public restroom should be established on one of the main floors of the House side of the Capitol," he complained.

On this point both Democrats and Republicans agreed. Public restrooms for women on the main floor became a bipartisan policy.

Kennedy calling Long

At the time Sen. Ed Long, Democrat of Missouri, was investigating wire tapping and tracing part of it back to the Justice Department when Bobby Kennedy was Attorney General, Sen. Russell Long, Democrat of Louisiana, got a telephone call. His secretary announced the call in advance with: "Sen. Robert Kennedy of New York is calling."

When Sen. Kennedy got on the line he said:

"Sen. Long, I must talk to you with you on what you've been saying about my work as Attorney General."

And Kennedy proceeded at some length to object to the wire-tapping charges.

Finally Sen. Long interrupted.

"I don't know what you're talking about," said Sen. Long of Louisiana. "I haven't said anything about you and the Justice Department. I don't know anything about these wire-tapping charges."

Aren't you Sen. Long?" asked Kennedy.

"I'm Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana," was the reply.

"Oh, you're the nice boy," said Sen. Kennedy.

"Which Sen. Kennedy are you?" asked Sen. Long.

Succeeding J.L. Cargile, now district manager at Jackson, Kyle joined the company in 1963 and served in Jackson as manager for business services and as manager at Hattiesburg before his present appointment at Biloxi.

A member of the Baptist Church he is married to the former Rose Cook of Vivian, La., and the couple have two children, Franklin, III and Elizabeth. A graduate of Louisiana State University he obtained his master's degree from the same institution.

"A Conservative View"

By James J. Kilpatrick

DALLAS, TEX., It isn't exactly accurate to say that delegates to this week's U.S. Conference of Mayors were concerned with two problems only, but it's not very far from the mark.

To be sure, the mayors attended sessions on transportation and health needs. There were consultations on hand to discuss air pollution, water pollution, and cold waste disposal. The mayors talked a little bit, now and then, about parks and recreation and the need for open spaces.

But in the end, almost everything boiled down to the problem of money, and the problem of the Negro. And to combine the two into one, the single dominant theme of this conference was the problem of paralyzing the federal government to serve as an angel without actually in the show.

Boston's hand, Mayor John F. Collins wrapped it up in a "Washington" as he resource, while we have all the problems. "The dependency of cities upon federal aid is not critical. They have come to rely upon grants from Washington to finance key programs of welfare, health, housing and poverty relief. Federal aid is the final factor in airports, hospitals, schools. The possibility of federal aid is the final factor in schools, parks, recreation centers, and pollution control."

"There is not a page in my budget," said one southern mayor, "that is not affected directly or indirectly by the prospect of federal aid. And there is not a single decision of any consequence, from the hiring of a fireman to the building of a tennis court, that is reached without some thought of Title VI."

Title VI in the short little section of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 which authorizes federal administrators, under certain circumstances, to withhold federal aid from any community that fails to achieve a satisfactory level of desegregation in its public programs. While the explicit threat of Title VI is of greatest importance in the south, it affects other cities also. And if the recommendations of the recent civil rights conference on housing and education are written into law, every city in the nation will come under the same gun: They must present acceptable area-wide plans for promoting racial integration or risk the loss of the federal money they have to have for survival.

A few of the mayors—Collins is among them—were optimistic that the cities can retain control of their own local programs. They agree that more federal aid will bring more federal regulations, and they acknowledge that many federal standards will have to be imposed on a locally national basis. Yet they believe that great flexibility will have to be maintained in such areas as the war on poverty, education, and urban renewal. Local conditions will have to be taken into account. The good-old programs won't work in any other way, "and it is increasingly vital to the Johnson administration to make them work."

Other mayors take a much gloomier view of the future. Not for publication (and that tag is itself a comment upon their dependency), they speak bitterly of the frustrations, the incessant paperwork, the wheel-spinning, that characterize the "new partnership" with federal agencies. They resent some of the fund-raising requirements as encroachments upon their own budget-making responsibilities. Even Collins acknowledged that in the "control and attack" approach, there is "something more of the stick."

Almost all of the mayors are agreed on this: More money will have to be provided if the cities are not to sink into chaos. Few of them expect significant help from their state governments, though reapportionment of state legislatures will help. Local tax sources have been squeezed until they are juiceless, and there is the further difficulty that many cities are prevented by state constitutional limitations from taking additional revenue steps even if the local voters were willing.

This money headache is compounded by the racial headache. As the central cities yield to larger Negro concentrations, the mayors must struggle with the mounting problems of law enforcement, welfare case loads, and hospitalization of the indigent. The colored families typical have much lower incomes and education than the white families they replace, and these disadvantages are reflected in retail sales, in community leadership, in the carrying of new industry, and in everything else.

Yet few of the mayors would accept the grim prophecy of Frank Lloyd Wright, some years ago, that "the city, as we know it today, is to die." New forms of municipal administration will have to be devised, if the "contributions" of the future are to be effectively governed; vast regional authorities may have to take charge of water supplies, sewerage, trafficways, and pollution control. Yet the city as such will survive, in their view, because of what comes of them as no man's inactive demand for "place" and "community."

If the money can only be found, and if the minority groups can only be elevated (or elevate themselves) into full membership in an urban society, the promise of the cities can yet be fulfilled. These are prodigious "ifs," but it is imperative that men comprehend the desperate plight of the cities. By 2000, nine out of 10 Americans will dwell within them.

Helicopter drops at Bayou Caddy

engaged in transporting prefabricated steel for construction of an observation tower at Point Claiborne, a short distance offshore from Bayou Caddy, crashed and burned about 10:15 a.m. last Thursday at Bayou Caddy just off Beach Boulevard.

The pilot, John Tanguen, 30, of Lafayette, La., escaped with only minor injuries. Tanguen said he was attempting to land on a patch of sand but came in too low and hit a high power line. He was the only occupant of the craft and escaped before it burned. The helicopter was destroyed.

The machine is owned by Porellum Helicopter Co., of Lafayette, and was under contract to the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey, builders of the tower, according to Russell W. Humphrey, spokesman for the survey.

Coast warden Patrick Toomey, of the Mississippi Fish and Game Commission, saw the crash and notified the sheriff. William Brown, Remo Zurek and Leonard Rayburn, all of Humphrey, employees of the Coast and Geodetic Survey also observed the crash. Rayburn drove Tanguen to Hancock General Hospital where he was

Mutual aid agreement reaffirmed

Six cities, a government agency and two paper companies last week reaffirmed a mutual aid agreement effective in time of disaster, fire or other emergency.

Originally signed in Dec. 1964, the agreement has called for fire and emergency units of Bay St. Louis, Bogalusa, Long Beach, Pass Christian, Poydras, and Slidell, La., to assist each other in time of disaster.

Communication capabilities kept overnight for observation. A hospital spokesman said the pilot sustained only superficial injuries.

and coordination between various fire departments were discussed at the signing luncheon along with the possibility of expanding the agreement to cover the Town of Waveland.

Mayor Gerald Lester of that community said Monday they would be willing to consider such a pact and Wayne Christian, fire chief, General

Electric Co., has opened negotiations for such facilities. GE, an operator and support corporation to National Aeronautics and Space Administration at MIT is responsible for fire protection and video capable of dealing with conventional, nuclear, chemical and atomic power to space vehicle

Addresses aerospace workshop

Terry H. Mahan, public affairs officer, National Aeronautics and Space Administration at Mississippi Test Facility, addressed the seventh annual Aerospace Education Workshop this week at University of Southern Mississippi.

Mahan spoke to the workshop on the subject of aerospace education. He said that the workshop is a key part of the Apollo program.

Stores and rural industrialization

More and more we get skeptical over federal proposals, particularly those of the "aid" variety with budgets inevitably involved. Nevertheless, two recently proposed laws strike us as having real merit.

First would try to dispute any assertion that automobile yards are a blight along almost all highways and approaches to cities. To do away with this it is now proposed to have the federal government put a special tax on automobile manufacturers with the resulting funds to be used to remove the metal from these hulks, an unprofitable business thus disposing of these eyesores. Nevertheless, if we could think of a way to get this done without the federal tax, we'd be for that.

The other proposal which gets our tentative endorsement is the bill before Congress to set up a Small Industrial Program under the Department of Agriculture. The purpose of this project would be to encourage establishment of more industries in small town areas.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman in a recent release said: "It is folly to stack up the shoulders of our people in suffocating steel, concrete storage bins in the city, while a figureheadful of our fellow citizens rattle around in a most barren full of untapped resources and employment."

Among advantages to the employees would be the ability needed to get to work, fishing before breakfast or a 10-minute drive to the golf course, expensive entertainment, and the fuller life in small towns and rural areas. They are better off to live.

And with modern transportation and communication it is practicable to establish industries there.

Hancock ASCS office combines at Poplarville
The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service office for Hancock County, located in Bay St. Louis, will move to Poplarville Aug. 25, and be combined with the ASCS of Pearl River County. The ASCS administers all federal farm programs to local farmers, and aids them in fertilization and cultivation of their crops.

This consolidation is because the agricultural areas in the county have shifted to a more northerly position and the new site has absorbed much of the farm lands so the work load is less than in most. Poplarville will be a more central point of administration.

The move will involve only one person, William D. Hobbs, manager who lives in Poplarville.

Farmers who need information will be able to secure it by writing the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, P. O. Box 113, Poplarville.

Depict life in Gainsville museum's aim
Exhibits are still being sought by Loggins Museum Committee to assist in depicting early life in the Gainsville Community, the site now occupied by Mississippi Test Facility.

Formed about two years ago the committee, consisting of Roy Baxter of Pearl River, president; Mrs. Fred Wagner, Bay St. Louis, secretary; and Roland Watson and Grady Thigpen of Piquette, had hoped to have the National Aeronautics and Space Administration renovate an old house within the historic zone for the museum.

NASA however considered the project too expensive in view of the fact that added to the renovation cost, police protection would have to be arranged due to the isolated location of the property.

Now asking that a portion of the county recreation building be set aside as a temporary display area, the group ultimately hopes to have the old Loggins plantation which served much of the new buffer zone area moved into the test site apartment quarters.

State to patrol Jordan

The State Boat and Water Safety Commission will send patrol boats in early July to check the Jordan River.

So Larry Waters of the commission's Jackson office informed the Chamber of Commerce office by phone Wednesday. Chamber directors had directed the secretary, Mrs. Frank Kiefer, to write the commission about danger to water skiers in the river and pollution of its waters by motor boats.

Mrs. Kiefer said she was informed by Waters that local law enforcement officials may control safety in the river but it is almost impossible to strike out a portion of a river to general use. Control would have to be over method boats are operated, she said.

Pearlington...

Ladner replied the Health, Education and Welfare agency had simply stated the school board had signed a compliance agreement and they should fulfill its terms.

The problem faced by the board is twofold. One factor is the lack of space at Pearlington as even when the new school is opened in fall transfers from the Loggown unit will fill available space. It is not expected the school will be entirely ready at that time and some delay is anticipated before all classrooms can be occupied.

The second problem is faculty. Having transported students to Valena C. Jones School, due to lack of alternate facilities, trustees are unable to claim teacher grants for this number as such monies payments are based on average daily attendance. In consequence, if a heavy increase of students is experienced in their three schools due to the federal integration program no funds are available to pay the required increase in faculty as well as other costs incident to the increased enrollment.

One cheery note was inserted into the situation however, when Ladner said Fred Wagner, their architect, had told him the construction was nearly back on schedule.

City plumbers, electricians need licenses

Examining and licensing of plumbers and electricians under the Bay St. Louis building code is being established under the direction of Harry Benjamin, chief building inspector.

He noted that all such tradesmen going to work in the city must be licensed and can secure the necessary papers from his office in City Hall. Permits and fees are required for all work, whether new or remodeling. Necessary forms have arrived and the new system is in operation.

Examinations will be staged the first Monday on each month. Several applications have been taken out but none have been returned yet so there will be no July test.

Benjamin said most local plumbers have bonded. They are required to post a $3,000 bond and a $50 fee with Commissioner of Finance, Warren Traub, to be put in escrow for possible destruction of city property, plus a $5 inspection fee to cover the three checks on each sewer connection.

Of direct significance to Hancock County with its port and harbor development was the retention of the gasoline tax rebate for the three coast counties.

A highway improvement program has been instituted and financed which Phillips said he feels will be of considerable benefit here.

Loopholes in the gas tax were plugged by House Bill 60 and should increase diesel gas sales at service stations along the highway, he continued.

On L and N bridge

Test pilings prove OK

Stacking concrete blocks on top of test pilings, Louisville and Nashville Railroad bridge engineers are busy testing weight retention capacity of bays called under the Bay of St. Louis.

Needing the information to confirm figures computed during the two years his company has been working on the project, Dick Whitaker of Hazlett and Erdal Consulting Engineers, Louisville, Ky., L and N's representative on the job, said yesterday that results of the piling load testing are pretty much as anticipated.

"We had to re-test on one piling after increasing its depth by five feet but apart from that the results are as we expected," Whitaker said.

The pilings, driven in at pre-selected points along the 10,220-foot length of the new bridge site, are being tested to the 400-500-ton mark according to the maximum load required of each when the structure is complete. Eighty to 100 feet long and 54 inches in diameter all pilings are being manufactured by Pro-Straight Concrete Products of Mandeville and shipped to the site by barge.

Pilings for Pier 2, the pivot pier, are expected to begin arriving next week. Preliminary coffer dam work is being completed and construction of this pier will begin with the pile driving.

Classed by Whitaker as still in initial stages, progress on the bridge is expected to become visible once the second phase, pier construction, is begun. This should be about mid-July.

Redistricting...

seats on the board of supervisors would give each member 1,680 constituents.

As a matter of fact, Waveland—a part of Beat 5—has 1,073 qualified voters, more than either Beat 1, 2 or 3 which each have a member on the board of supervisors. Three precincts in Bay St. Louis—Central School with 704 on its list, Courthouse with 767 and South Bay with 720—have more voters than either Beats 1 or 2.

First efforts in recent years to give Hancock residents proportionate representation on their governing body date back to 1954 when a petition to redistrict was filed. After much maneuvering, this was thrown out. Relief was sought through the state courts in 1962. The supervisors said then they would redistrict when the effects of the NASA installation had been determined and the case was beaten.

In the case styled A.K. Martinovich, Jr., et al., vs. H.G. Dean et al., a group of Beat 5 citizens went to the federal courts in search of assistance.

The Harrison, Pearl River and Pike redistricting cases are to be heard before a panel composed of Judges Coleman, Cox and Dan M. Russell, Jr., July 15, also in Jackson. Indications are that Harrison will present some sort of reapportionment plan. Pearl River supervisors, under fire from growing Pledgeone, have adopted an at-large voting plan for their supervisors in an effort to stave off redistricting.

Forger given 8 years

Circuit Judge Louis B. Grant dropped up another number term of court when he signed the minutes last week.

Cases handled during the last three days of court include State vs. Theodore Jack who pleaded guilty to two counts of unsworn forgery. Jack, already under sentence in Harrison County, was given four years in the state penitentiary on each count, to run concurrently with each other and the Harrison County sentence, which began Aug. 18, 1965.

In Richard D. Russ vs. Edward L. Keane, Levan J. Ledner and William R. Jordan, a jury found for the defendants, dismissing Jordan as a defendant on Judge Grant's peremptory instructions and clearing Keane and Ledner of any liability.

However, Grant sustained Russ' motion for a new trial but overruled as to Ledner. No date was set for the new trial.

Russ had sued for a total of $353,827.64 for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained on June 6, 1965, when his automobile was involved in a chain collision with three other vehicles on US 90 just west of Bay St. Louis.

All parties to the suit were employed at Mississippi Test Facility at the time. Russ resided in Piquette, Jordan, Long Beach, Ledner, Saucier, Keane is a non-resident of Mississippi and had pleaded guilty in JP court to following too close.

Judgments rendered were: Michael D. Haas, trustee for Bay St. Louis office of Commercial Finance Co. vs. L. Edward Cuevas and wife, Edith Cuevas, and/or Frank Cuevas, and/or Mrs. John Dawson, default judgment of $315, the assessed value of certain personal property.

Bent of Piquette vs. W.C. Frierson, Wiley Frierson and Mrs. Wiley Frierson, default judgment of $1,196.58.

Mark Fitzgerald Corp. vs. Robert Bonnet and Bill Morreale, default judgment, recover a used Mack truck.

United States Rubber Co. vs. Jimmy B. O'Bannon, doing business as Trucktown, Order setting aside judgment of May 17, 1965, for $409.61. In another suit involving the same litigants, default judgment for $2,472.00 allegedly due on open account was handed down.

Cummings and Co. vs. E. R. Hinchey, doing business as Holiday Santa Motel, Defaulted verdict of jury for plaintiff, $1,105.04.

In H.C. Ledner vs. A.C. Favre and Betty Younger, Favre failed to appear and Ledner was awarded $423 judgment and Betty Younger was found liable on a valid check for purchasing certain items in an account to be paid by the court or a later hearing. The check was issued to call the business involved, the proceeds going to Betty Younger as the amount owed by Favre and the balance to be paid as partial satisfaction of the $423 judgment.

In an appeal from JP court, a charge of driving while intoxicated against Vance Dabbs was changed to reckless driving. He was fined $475 and costs with a thirty-day suspension. Another case was not presented.

Commercial Credit Equipment Co. vs. Deane Cuevas was non-suited.

Oak Harbor club gets its charter

Oak Harbor Club, Inc., a non-profit organization formed to provide recreational facilities for residents and home owners in Oak Harbor subdivision at Pearlington, received its charter of incorporation Monday.

A special meeting to elect the first formal board of directors of the group has been called for 7:30 p.m. July 6 at the home of Jack Schrock, acting secretary, in Oak Harbor.

Other temporary officers are Edward Snow, president; James Bruce, vice president; and Leo Davis, treasurer. Seven directors are to be elected with the four officers to be chosen from that group. A three-acre tract in the subdivision was set aside for recreational purposes and the newly formed club will have jurisdiction over this, Schrock explained. Construction of a swimming pool will be the first project. In future years the club hopes to build a clubhouse, tennis courts and other facilities as warranted.

No stock will be sold in the non-profit corporation and its operation will be financed through membership fees to those who meet the criteria set up under the charter. The temporary officers are seeking a meeting this week with directors of Pearl River Development Corp., Oak Harbor developers, to determine what portion of the existing marina will be turned over for the club's use.

Legal details of the incorporation were handled by Nicholas M. Hase of Bay St. Louis. Anthony's...

Tommy Goetz, detailed and assigned to lead the Troop at the beach followed by Adams, two for three, Merriotte and Rhedco, each two for four. Troop got 14 hits, Peat's Don 10, winning pitcher was Almedo, four Taylor.

In Trovira's surprise win over Chasco Sea, Trovira scored six in the bottom of the second and three in the fourth. Winning pitcher Favre blanked Chasco Sea in every inning except the fifth when they put over three.

Trovira's big gun was Billy Thomas who hit three for three including a home run. Chasco Sea's Paul Smith came up with a home and a double in three times at bat. Losing pitcher was Jim Mayfield.

Southern Realty's sponsor, Bill Johnston, and chairman of the trophy, Larry Mathen, presented their appreciation all who made the affair possible, including sponsors and Al Victor of Regal Brewery who supplied a round truck.

Threat of traffic toll on 4th cited

Col. T.H. Birdsong, Commissioner of Public Safety, proposed this week. "That the number of vehicles on Mississippi Highway 90, this coming day of July will be heavy. The potential for death and injury traffic mishaps will be kept in mind."

The Mississippi Highway Patrol predicts 15 persons will die over this 72 hour holiday period and at least 147 hospitalized. Every available officer will be on duty with cars or help lessen this figure and deal with the traffic drivers who are the potential killers on our highways," Birdsong stated.

The greater the volume of traffic the more important it is to remember that safety depends on the smooth, even flow of vehicles," he said. "When you see a car ahead of you, you're in trouble -- and so are the drivers around you."

Col. Birdsong cited a few examples of drivers that deal up traffic and cause accidents. "Slipping suddenly can cause an approaching pile-up of cars behind you. Making a turn from the wrong lane to cut in front of things up. Hugging the bumper of a car ahead makes you a sitting duck for a careless accident if the car ahead stops suddenly."

"Speed is another thing that must be adjusted to the traffic flow," Birdsong said. "If you make a hazard of yourself by harrying down the road faster than the drivers around you, you're likely to tangle with them. But it's not only to drive too slowly either -- you can throw a monkey wrench into the traffic pattern if you force other cars on the road to take chances trying to get around you."

"In other words," Birdsong said, "drive with patience and courtesy, and avoid any driving maneuver that will disturb the flow of traffic around you."
